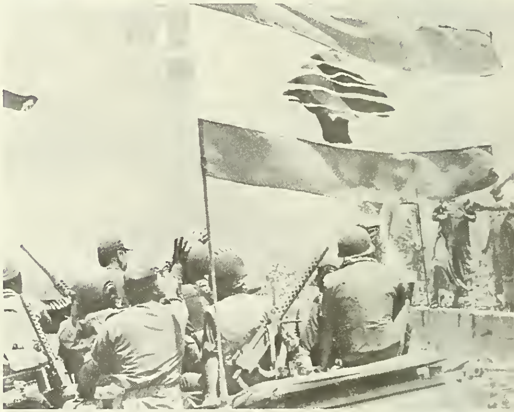
Rabbi Israel Miller: Sept. 5, 1981
1981

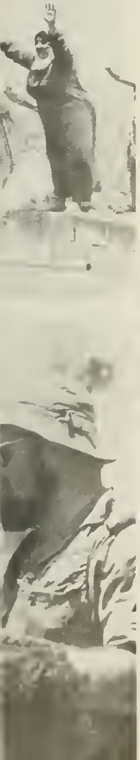
of the Y.U. Centennial (1886-1986)

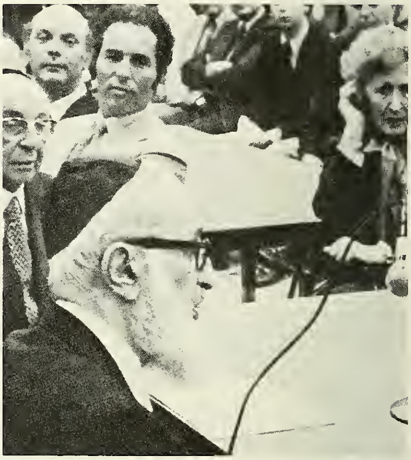
Through Crusader castles and snowy mountains, by golden beaches and ice-glazed rivers, they fought a bitter war. The soldiers of Milhemet Shlom Hagalil are businessmen and farmers, fashion designers and mechanics, professors and construction contractors, our friends from Yeshivot Hesder, our cousins in Haifa, our neighbors who made Aliyah to Jerusalem. Hoping to preserve the lives of the Galil's inhabitants now and in the future, they lost many of their own lives. As the smallest possible token of our indebtedness and appreciation, we dedicate this yearbook to them.

The Lebanon War was the most painful in Israel's history. For the first time the soldiers fought without the support of a national consensus behind them; also, many were unclear as to the ultimate goals of the war. Especially because of this, the Israeli soldiers deserve our respect and support. For whatever debates rage about the political aspect of the war, the conduct of the soldiers is worthy of admiration. They fought bravely, pursued their goals valiantly, and acted humanely in the midst of the most inhuman conditions. Strong as cedars and gentle as deer, they battled strenuously to bring peace to their northern border and a semblance of order to a troubled land.

Once more Israel and her people have impressed us with awed respect and admiration, but again the occasion is a tragic one. We hope that in the future these men and women can struggle not with weapons but with plows, scalpels, and watercolors; may they work together as well and as unitedly as they did in Lebanon, but with the only task before them the furtherance of a decent and productive national life within the borders of Eretz Israel.





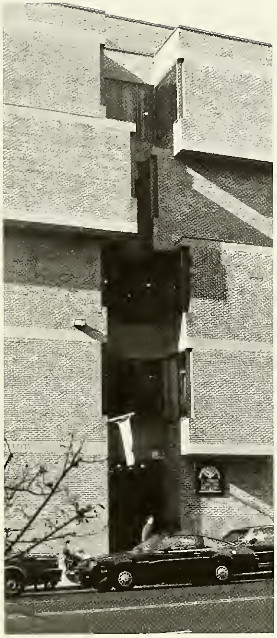


The idea of Torah U'mada flits through all aspects of the college; it shows up in odd places and strongly influences the flavor of the whole, like bits of cheddar cheese in a chef's salad. And we have heard it discussed time after time. We have heard it debated, berated, expounded, confounded, eulogized, criticized, perfected, dissected. We've seen it used to churn out public relations material, as fresh heads of cabbage are turned into cole-slaw. We're too used to the idea, too numbed by its frequent use for cynical purposes. We are often unable to realize that Torah U'mada plays a vital and constant role in our day to day life at Yeshiva.

The images of Torah U'mada are clear and sharp for us all. Who hasn't seen the wonderful picture of rabbis — generously bearded, garbed in black — standing with a host of sifrei torah on the steps before the original Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary? Who hasn't seen photographs of Yeshiva students, distinctive in their kippot or denim skirts, toiling in front of computers and test-tubes? Who hasn't been confronted with an image of secular and sacred books mingled on a desk with the straps of t'fillin? These are all good images, poetic images, suggestive images. They tell us much about the concepts of Torah U'mada: continuity with the past, interest in modernity, synthesis. But they don't tell us a heck of a lot about how the idea of Torah U'mada permeates our life at the college, like soy sauce permeates a pepper steak. This is an aspect well worth considering.

For instance, we have school on Chanuka. Shiur and Jewish studies on Chanuka is one thing; but it's crazy that we have to sit through lectures on Victorian poetry and Quantum mechanics when our minds are filled with Macabees and twirling dreydls. Be that as it may, every night for a week we trudge back to class to light Chanuka candles in the halls. With our heavy books and our shoes wet from the snow, we shlep out chairs, overturned garbage cans, little tables, and we light the menorah. This year, the members of one floor in Morg started singing Chanuka zmirot after hadlakat nerot. Maybe it was the spirit of the day, maybe it was the spirited music someone was playing on his saxophone, but all of a sudden they started to dance. Soon the dancers ran wild through all the rooms, pulling people away from the telephone, grabbing them out of bed. Cramming into the elevator, they came to the next floor, sang and danced and recruited more people. They visited every floor, they shanghaied every guy they met to dance with them. Finally they reached the lobby; tired as they were from the long school day, they found the strength to whirl for half an hour in a circle around the confused security guards. They sang louder and louder.

That, my friend, is Torah U'mada.



No college campus is complete without a dramatic society, and YC is fortunate to have the excitement of the Yeshiva College Dramatic Society. The excellence of YCDS productions are largely due to the dedication of the actors and the extraordinary amount of time they spend rehearsing. Recently, a group of students had a strong, burning desire to act. However, they could not put in the time YCDS demanded, because they had previous commitments in the form of night seders and the like. So the Yeshiva College Jewish Theatre was formed. In the spirit of Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney, they decided to put on a show for the Spring Festival of the Arts at Yeshiva. "I can get the fourth floor of the library," one of them said. "I can get a local butcher store to donate the props we need," said another. The students built the sets, directed the play, acted, and organized musical accompaniment. They didn't sacrifice any of their time set aside for learning at night. The crowds loved their play; and the critics raved.

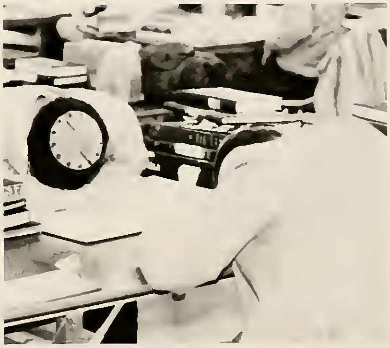
After elementary school few people in America really celebrate Tu B'shvat. We're no longer presented with a bag full of exotic fruit. We ourselves must run off to the grocery at the last minute and buy figlets from California in order to be yotse the shehecheyanu. No one over thirteen sings "Hashkediya Porachat" any more. This past Tu B'shvat was a cold and snowy day. Everyone thought that the only way we would notice the chag would be the much appreciated skipping of tachanun. But in the cafeteria at lunchtime, among the shapeless eggplant cutlets and tomato-soaked stews, was a bowl filled with fruit. Here were figs and dates; here were raisins and nuts; here were sticks of the fruit which looks like pieces of dried rubber, which no one sees except on Tu B'shvat. Shehecheyanu was no problem, and a mood of holiday came to the Yeshiva students.

Only in an atmosphere of Torah U'mada could a schoolday be so suffused with the special feeling of a chag.



Campus controversy is an important aspect of college life. In the weeks before Meir Kahane came to speak here, arguments raged about whether he should be allowed to speak, whether he should have been invited, whether we should react strongly to his coming. The evening he spoke, students formed a mass protest rally, voicing objections not to his presence but to his views. The protest was so strong that Kahane had to be slipped in a back door to avoid a confrontation with the protesters. The scene could have been a sixties demonstration against the war in Vietnam. Except for one thing: inside the hall, Kahane defended his radical views with words from halachic and biblical sources. Outside the protesters waved signs inscribed with psukim in bold letters. The demonstrators sang songs of peace and universal understanding, taken not from Dylan or Baez but from the words of the Torah.

The yearly cycle at Yeshiva is the Jewish cycle. Our college days are filled with Jewish learning and values; our yeshiva days are filled with the liberal arts and involvement in Western society. The whole atmosphere is saturated with the Halacha as a latke is saturated with oil. If you want an ideological examination of Torah U'mada, take a look at Rabbi Carmy's excellent Torah U'mada reader. If you want a mindless glorification of the concept, YUPR can provide you with sufficient material. If you would like a poetic description, Cynthia Ozick has a beautiful one in her latest novel, The Cannibal Galaxy. But if you want to understand, or to remember, how Torah U'mada affects us students as we study at Yeshiva, take a simple look at any aspect of student life. Stop and consider: this college is not like all other colleges. There is something very special about it; with all its faults this attraction makes it sometimes irresistable.

That is Torah U'mada.

February 27, 1985

TO THE YESHIVA COLLEGE CLASS OF 1985:

By accident of the calendar, you have a very special distinction: You are the last class of the first century of the existence of Yeshiva University.

Your class has achieved a splendid record at Yeshiva College -- competent, constructive, and cooperative. You are an ideal microcosm of Yeshiva College as a whole.

As you march on to the future -- in careers, families, and personal growth -- we are confident that you will represent Yeshiva University with dignity, implementing the ideals of Torah Umadda in a manner that will reflect glory upon your alma mater.

On behalf of the faculty and administration of Yeshiva, I wish you the years, the strength, and the happiness to make a creative contribution to your communities, to America, to Israel, and to the Torah which you studied so assiduously during your years here and which, I hope, will continue to be "your life and the length of your days."

Cordially yours,

NORMAN LAMM
President

OFFICE OF THE DEAN

March 15, 1985

Dear Graduates:

You have successfully completed your studies at Yeshiva College. This is more than a personal achievement. As members of our fifty-fourth graduating class, you share with your classmates and more than a half-century of alumni a commitment to the Yeshiva University ideal of Torah u'Madda.

This commitment has required an enormous investment of time and energy. You have chosen to involve yourselves in a rigorous dual program, each component of which is in itself demanding of full time attention. You have accepted the challenge of integrating your Torah studies with what is best in Western civilization and culture.

Your success in meeting this challenge and realizing the University ideal will be reflected in your lives and careers. You are fortunate in having as models those graduates who have demonstrated in their lives and careers that this challenge can be met successfully and that the Torah u'Madda ideal retains its freshness and vitality.

Therefore, as you leave Yeshiva College, I congratulate you, I wish you well, and I urge you to bear in mind that you will be the models for future Yeshiva College men.

Sincerely,

Norman S. Rosenfeld
Dean

Think of these past four years; try to remember particulars. Is it all a muddle of running from shiur to class to shiur, cramming in the library until they shut the lights on you, and grabbing the nearest train or car that is heading down to Stern? You must concentrate.

Through the Years . . .

Sit down, my friend; take a deep breath. Pore over a pile of old commentators; take a look at a classmate's pictures; start talking with an old friend. The images will come, I assure you. They will start dancing out towards you, those images of our lives for the past four years.

We came from a high school a block away; we came from halfway around the world. Our first year was the most successful year for the Early Admission Program, which opened the doors of the university to those gifted few who showed remarkable scholastic achievement (were there any freshmen over sixteen?).

Freshman Year . . .

It was a year of change for the institution. A terrible battle raged over restructuring the curriculum. Students greeted the proposal with either: "Oh yeh! This here college is going to let us do whatever the heck we want," or "this university surely must remember its responsibility in espousing the great philosophy of liberal art education." Wurzweiler was about to move uptown, and many faculty members led us to believe that the move would involve an influx of scantily clad, seductive graduate students (who turned out to be mainly nuns, male social workers, and middle aged housewives).

We were surprised to read in the New York Times that Yeshiva would soon be closing down. We just got here! Was it something we said? The problem was financial and it was remedied by Yeshiva's appeal to the public for one hundred million dollars. Is that not chutzpah? A rash of muggings descended on Yeshiva students like a plague. Remembering the small amount of the security forces at that time, we are tempted to say (before we think better of it) "Thank goodness for the sniper!"

We returned to school next September — But wait, did we? No, we left Washington Heights for a year in Israel. However a number of students stayed behind and actually continued college! What a year those Y.C. Sophomores had. Again Yeshiva made the New York Times, this time for the extraordinary achievement of holding an elaborate M*A*S*H* Bash, bidding farewell to the 4077. We bid farewell to another military man, the beloved Colonel Marmorstein, who retired after doing whatever could be done to keep us secure in the pre-sniper years. The college was censured for the innocuous, totally blameless act of firing a tenured faculty member.

There was censure from other sources because of the establishment of the Y.U. cheerleading squad, a group of dedicated Stern women who followed the basketball team around from game to game. One team member responded to the loud criticism with the memorable quote, "The cheerleaders help to ease tension on the busride to the games." No one ever figured that one out.

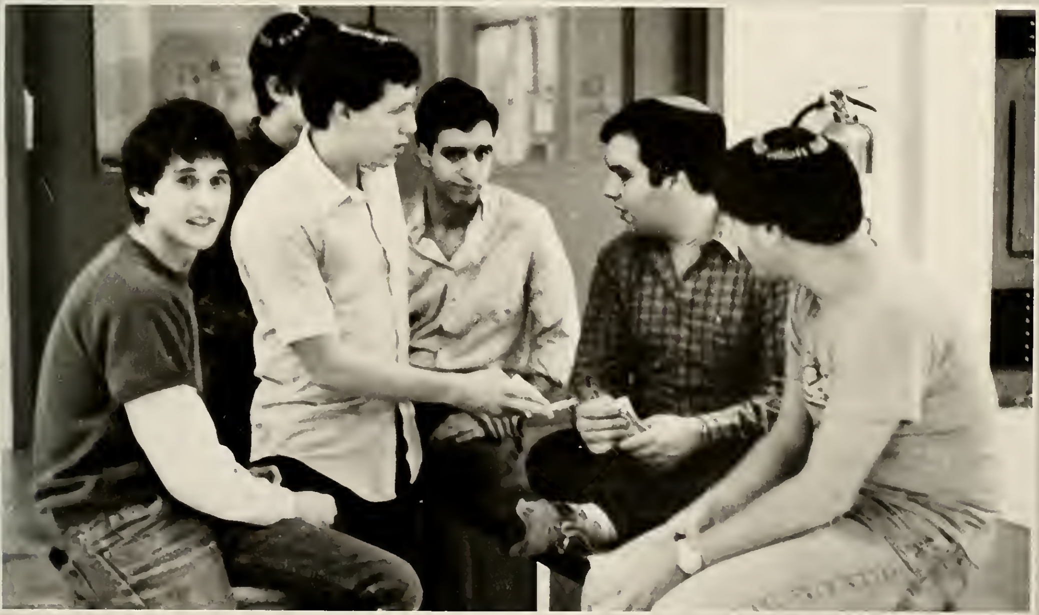
Another source of friction was the Observer editorial against "deliberate, strategically placed" typos in the Commentator. Commie board members threatened to sue the Observer for libel, saying that not the Commentator staff, but the Observer women were acting with "mawitchous intent."



We settled back into school our third year, comfortable and already at home. A dynamic student council was elected which sponsored various cultural events, such as lectures, concerts, and smashing up a car during midterm week. Because of these and other controversial events, the student council was accused of Hellenism. "That's ridiculous," responded the Student Council president at the Y.C.S.C. toga party, clad in a toga and crowned with a laurel wreath. "We reject Hellenism as much as the next guy."

Junior Year . . .

Commencement, which was to be held in Radio City Music Hall, was moved back to Danziger Campus; the rockettes weren't ready for Yeshiva students yet. On a more serious note, a malicious sniper struck, stalking Yeshiva students with tragic results. We were warmed by the support of the entire Jewish community. The orthodox students of a city college, for example, had T-shirts made up that said "Don't shoot. I go to Queens." To decorate the area, the administration bought flowers, trees, and benches, the last of which were soon labelled "sitting duck" benches, and were surprisingly rarely used.

The fabled gym began to rise, or more exactly, construction crews began ripping up the grass and hedges in the back of Danziger Campus. Purim fun at Yeshiva was enhanced by the Hymietator, with jokes that Jesse Jackson, the inspiration for the issue, would have been proud of.

Senior year. Ah, senior year. No worries, no pressures. Wait, why are we all still in the library studying? Why are we still rushing from class to class? Aaah — GRE's, and M-CAT's, and L-SAT's, and the almighty Kaplan's. Who said that senior year is a breeze? It's more like a small hurricane. But still there is a certain spirit in the air, a greater tendency to cut classes and push off schoolwork.

YCSC sponsored a highly controversial political party (neither Democratic nor Republican) on election eve. Original posters advertising the event included the letters "BYOB" — which does not stand for "Bring your old Bubby." Meir Kahane spoke at the college, eliciting fervent responses and the most violent public protest here since security threatened to discontinue van service between Y.C. and Stern.

Dear Rabbi Cheifitz,

We are writing to express our concern about an event that occurred last night on the second floor of the Morgenstern dormitory. Mark Raden squirted the fire extinguisher for absolutely no reason other than to play with it. We consider this a horrifying atrocity. It is a serious fire hazard. If there should ever be a fire on the floor what would we do if the extinguisher was empty? A fire extinguisher is not a toy and therefore something must be done to punish him and teach him and others a lesson. There is no question regarding his guilt. Joshua Lipshite, the head dorm counselor saw him playing with the extinguisher. Due to the serious nature of this crime when action is taken everybody in the school must be informed so as to warn othere as it says כל העם ישמעו וכו'. We feel expulsion from the dormitory is necessary as it says [illegible]. Eventhough Marc is from out-of-state, he does have an aunt that lives close to the school. Perhaps, at first this seems like a harsh punishment but it is a very serious offense and in general there is a problem concerning students fooling with extinguisher. Additionally, this is not the first time he has been caught commiting this crime. He has received several warnings from friends, the dorm counselor, and even the head dorm counselor. He has not taken heed to these warnings and worse yet he shows complete disregard for the safety of others.

Thank you for taking your time to read this letter and please see to it that the dormitories remain a safe place to live.

Sincerely,

RESIDENCE HALLS

February 27, 1985
3:47 AM

Dear Bnei Yeshiva נ״י,

(בראשית ז:יז) ויהי המבול ארבעים יום על הארץ
הקב״ה promised כלל ישראל that a מגפה of such magnitude would never occur again. Yet, a rift has developed in the HALLS of our Yeshiva. Last night, faced with the lack of proper facilities, a number of our בחורים took the initiative and christened the Sixth-floor Max Stern Mikvah. Although many of our camp sympathize with this need, others have expressed some misgivings.

The mikvah was denied השגחה. According to David Feder, שליט״א, SOY's failure to endorse the mikvah was due to the lack of written permission of SOY גזל, Belz School of Music, and the Abraham H. Tauber Speech Society. Additionally, Rabbi Joshua Kupchik (Riets '97) asserts that the פסול resulted from the lack of 40 סאה in the mikvah. Rabbi Jay Blazer points out that even with the required 40 סאה, since water from a fire extinguisher is considered מים שאובים, the mikvah would be פסול (cf. Mikvahs, Plumbing & Other Home Improvements, Rabbi Jay Blazer, Time-Life Publishers).

Having been FLOODED with שאלות about the mikvah, I feel compelled to dry up the sea of confusion. חז״ל state משנכנס אדר מרבים בשמחה. Given that אין שמחה בלי תורה, and אין תורה אלא מים, it may be concluded that the mikvah was a NOBLE endeavor. Thus, the בחורים who took part in this act are to be commended for their actions. While the rest of us are drowning in a SEA of apathy, one בחור has shown tremendous selfless devotion to the upgrading of the spirituality of our Yeshiva. A hearty יישר כח goes to Phillip Ledereich.

May הקב״ה continue to give us the power to EXTINGUISH these FIRES of strife in כלל ישראל. May He continue to grant Josh Lifshitz the knowledge and wisdom to realize that this מעשה is only WATER UNDER THE BRIDGE, and he can bet that no one knows what the cards hold in store.

by Joey Lipner

I can't believe how soon I'll leave the Heights
And school. Soon we'll sit 'neath traffic lights
Bored by the best speakers, and snore or snort
By our million dollar basketball court.
We've yearned for this, we've earned this parchment burned
With red ribbons, mouthing like gibbons all we've learned.

But classes? I don't remember classes.
Remember rather the important things:
Hoagies, movies, village-punk-rock glasses,
Stern vans, Broadway, large engagement rings,
Fire Extinguishers spraying swords of water,
Baseball in the hall, hours on the phone,
College friendships, pac-man for a quarter,
Waking chavrutas so you won't learn alone,
Teachers fat and thin, excellent or bad
Caravans to Bernstein's, lab 'till ten o'clock,
Counting by bottles how much beer you had,
Finding burgers below your dirty sock.

Why me? Was I worthy at last to reap
The dis- and advantages these all heap
On me? The campus, with all its factors,
Domes and towers, vans and gyms and tractors,
Straight through the stones it too demands me true
And asks with sneer or smile or tear, Why You?

The Heights of My College Career

by Naftali R. Friedman

Looking back at my four years at Yeshiva University, I realize that I have only actually been here for two years. Nevertheless, the intensity and profundity of the experience of those years has left an indelible impression on my outlook on life and on my bank account.

Years from now I will flip through the pages of this yearbook to recapture those memorable events that made our stay at Yeshiva so special like Homecoming Parade and Clovis Maksoud's stirring speech. To further evoke the memories and emotions of my daze at Y.U., I will supplement my reading with Commentator Purim issue of 1985 — an edition which will always remain in our hearts and in a safety deposit box in the Y.U. office of Public Censorship.

One of the great advantages of attending Yeshiva which I will always be grateful for is the opportunity to have lived and studied in Washington Heights. "The Heights," as it is affectionately referred to by its English-speaking inhabitants, is an interesting neighborhood with a rich history. One can stroll on 187th St. between Amsterdam and Audobon Avenues at all hours of the day or night (at one's own risk) and partake in the festivities of the perpetual mardi-gras. On one short block one can hear many different types of ethnic music piping through car stereos and thirteen speaker cassette radios large enough to house four to six occupants. Local women, aimlessly gazing out of their open windows, pillow under their elbows, watch their husbands (?) and others down below, engaging in their favorite activities, like automobile repair and 'friendly' domino games. Live chickens occasionally cross the street; later they will be traditionally roasted to a sumptuous crisp under five hundred watt red light bulbs at Mcdovidos or one of the area's other fine restaurants.

Because I lived in exotic Washington Heights during the semester, my friends always understood why I preferred not to spend my intercession sunning myself in places like Puerto Rico, Mexico, and Spain. Instead, I would spend them sunning myself on the slopes of Killington, studying for Mishna Berura behinot.

Doctor, Lawyer, Rabbi, Chief.

It shouldn't surprise you that a number of our students become rabbis. After all, we are the only Yeshiva University.

But doctors and lawyers? And business chiefs, too?

Yes.

Yeshiva University—with its 15 schools, divisions and affiliates—is an extraordinary, one-of-a-kind learning, service and research institution. Dedicated to keeping the tradition of Judaism alive. And committed to giving men and women, of all religions, the finest higher education available today.

On our campuses, you'll find a faculty which includes one of the world's outstanding Talmudic scholars and the only female Nobel Prize Laureate in the United States. You'll learn about on-going research projects in the fields of solar energy, electronics, and gerontology—as well as Holocaust and Sephardic studies. And you'll come across special seminars on subjects ranging from "Antiques and Judaica" to "Financial Planning for Women."

We have seven specialized libraries, housing some 850,000 volumes. A fascinating museum devoted to ancient and contemporary Hebraica and Judaica. An expert who investigates communication among dolphins. And that's only the beginning.

Practically everyone in the world has heard about the Albert Einstein College of Medicine. (But how many know that it's part of Yeshiva University?) Rated among the top medical schools in the nation, Einstein has graduated almost 3,000 brilliant physicians and scientists. It has been applauded as a medical research center—with life-saving programs in cancer, heart disease, liver and kidney ailments, neurological and brain disorders, diabetes, and more.

Only five years old, our Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law has already made a name for itself. A member of the first graduating class was appointed clerk to a United States Supreme Court Justice.

And right now at our Wurzweiler School of Social Work, a Protestant minister, a Roman Catholic priest, and eleven rabbis are getting their masters in a program that is the first of its kind for clergy.

If all this comes as a surprise to you, there should be one thing that doesn't. Tuition alone cannot possibly finance and maintain our present programs. Tuition alone won't provide the kind of higher education Yeshiva students demand and deserve.

We need your support.

The Century Campaign aims to raise $100 million for the University's immediate and long-term needs. Please join our list of distinguished donors.

Your gift—whether big or small—will truly make a difference to our future doctors, lawyers, rabbis, and chiefs.

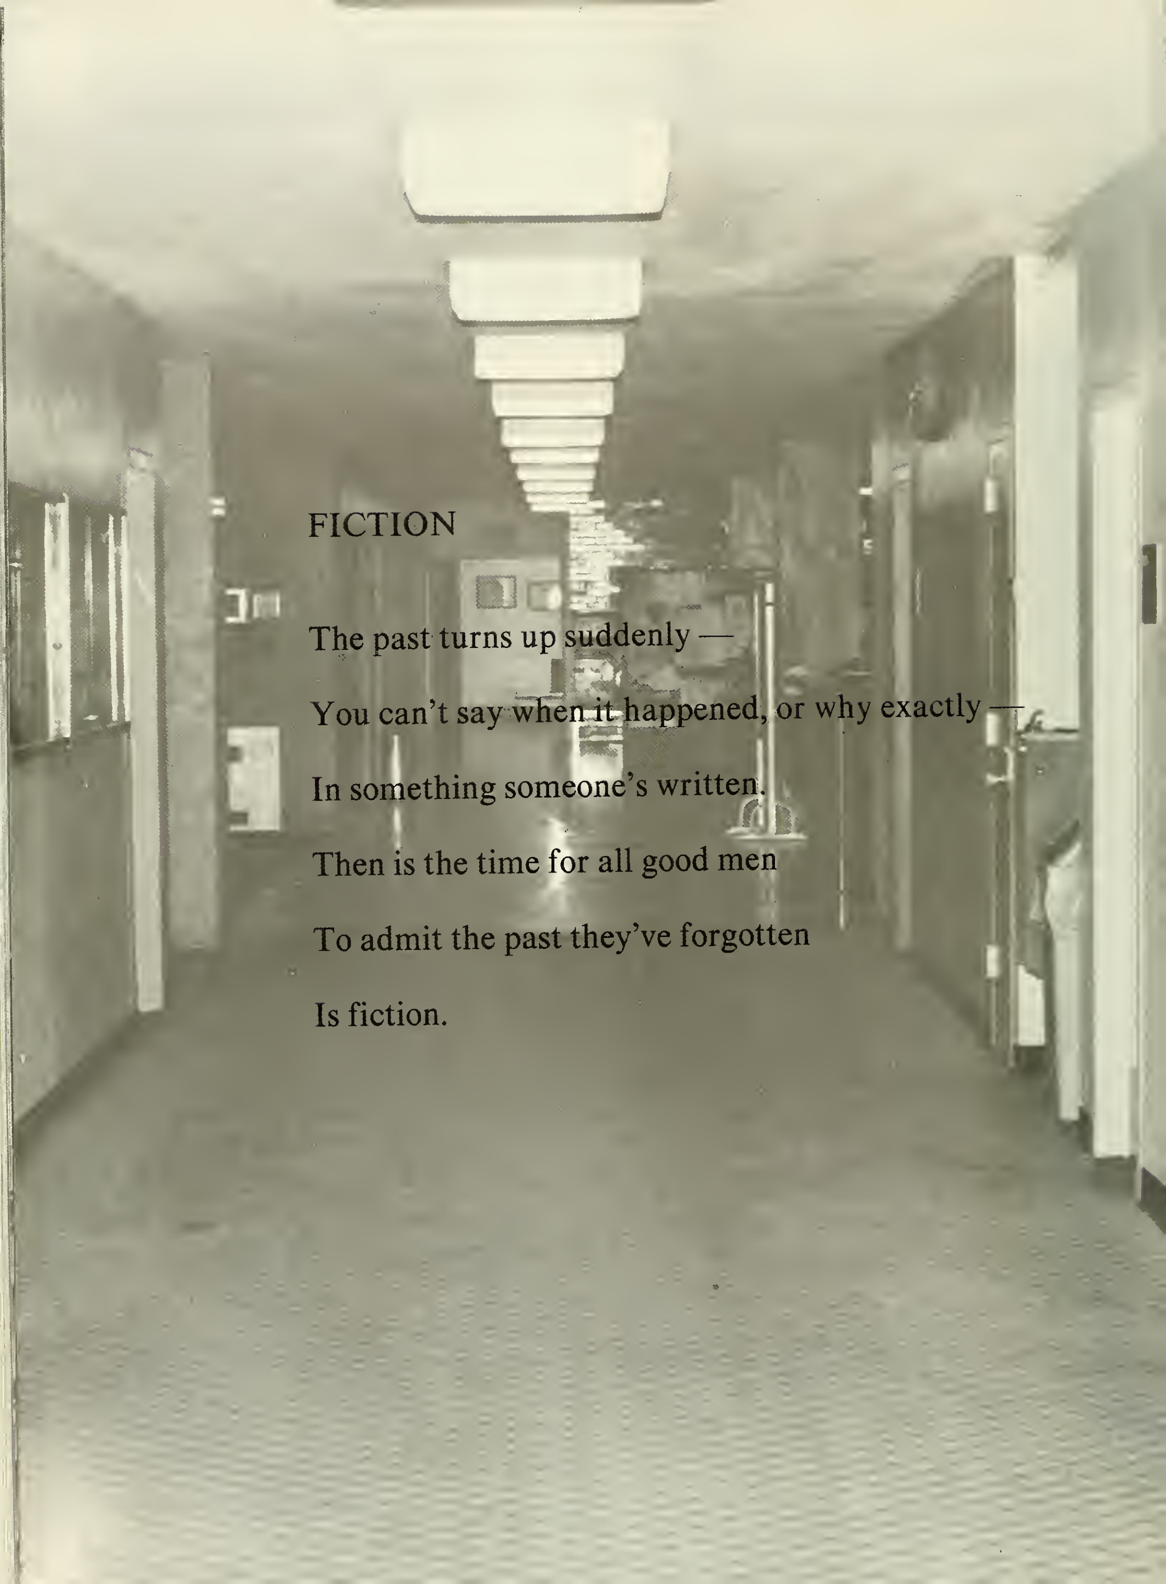
To our dear classmates,

The yearbook staff would like to thank all those people who have helped in the production of MASMID '85. We decided that this yearbook should come out in the summer so that our memories of Y.U. will still be fresh while looking at it. We are sorry that the latter events of the year could not be included in the pictures. These events include: Y.C.D.S. Production of JOSEPH (which was a marvelous show), Ira Meisels becoming Valedictorian over Jeff Kern and Jack Doveck, Dr. Lee elected Senior Professor, Barry Resenberg elected President of Y.C.S.C. over the everpopular Jo Kranzler and Nadrum Bane, Commentator's 50th Year Dinner, the N.C.A.A. Riflery Championship held on Amsterdam Ave. (?), the 1985 graduation — (in which the graduates will not be represented by a valedictorian, unless Egon Brenner is it), Yom Haatzmaut Gala Celebration and Concert, Senior Dinner and many other exciting events.

We thought it was worth it for you to receive MASMID '85 before your PhD's so we risked it. Sorry to all those who missed the boat.

Thanks again,
David & Elliot



FICTION

The past turns up suddenly —

You can't say when it happened, or why exactly —

In something someone's written.

Then is the time for all good men

To admit the past they've forgotten

Is fiction.
